Posted by laura mirviss at 1/14/2013 10:29 AM CST

The results are in: The American Institute of Architects has released its annual list of Institute Honor Awards. The 2013 winning projects--28 in total--range from the much-hyped Barnes Foundation in Philadelphia to the lesser-known BNIM offices in Des Moines. Renzo Piano's Menil Collection in Houston won the AIA's 2013 25-Year Award, which honors a project that continues to be influential decades after its construction.

The announcements come a month after the AIA named the other big-ticket winners of 2013: Thom Mayne won the 2013 AIA Gold Medal and Tod Williams Billie Tsien Architects won the 2013 AIA Architecture Firm Award.

The full list of winners is below.

Do you have an image of exceptional design work that doesn't quite fit in one of our five showcase photo galleries (Residential, Architectural Photographer, Small-City, Student and The Architect's Hand)? We still want a chance to review and possibly display your images. So send us your photos that fall outside those categories (perhaps a great interior, or an office tower in a major city, etc.), and we will handpick the very best to showcase on our site.
